

Biographical Information

Barry C. Vaughan, Esq.

As of 2014, Barry Vaughan has over 32 years of experience as a practicing attorney representing both plaintiffs and defendants in complex litigation. Now he is offering his services as a mediator, discovery referee and special master. His experience suits him well to the task. As a plaintiffs' lawyer, Barry successfully represented thousands of property owners in construction defect cases. Before that, as a defense lawyer, Barry successfully defended numerous construction defect cases. Barry has broad experience in other areas as well. He has represented and advised oil companies, motion picture companies, municipalities, building material companies, construction litigation, waste disposal companies, retailers, insurance companies, small businesses, Fortune 500 companies and others on a wide range of matters, including federal environmental law, commercial contracts, title insurance, real property, water rights, mineral rights, oil & gas, motion picture finance, publishing and cable television franchising, to name a few. A respected attorney in the courtroom, with significant experience in jury trials, court trials and arbitration, Barry also has several appellate court decisions to his credit.
